Dysart and MNR clash over hunting in park

by Andy Holloway

Dysart et al council has told an Algonquin Park official it is prepared to take the Ministry of Natural Resources to court to protect its residents' right to hunt and trap in the park.

Clyde-Bruton, the area under dispute, is at the southern end of the park. The land was given to Algonquin Park by the municipality in 1960 providing that it could still be used for traditional purposes "in perpetuity" by the citizens of Dysart, said Reeve Chris Hodgson at last Monday's meeting.

Greg Martel, a superintendent at the park, agreed there was a contract signed by the government, but questioned how long it was supposed to be in effect.

"Yes, there was an agreement, but things do move on," said Martel.

Martel said the ministry was responding to public pressure to eliminate hunting and trapping in the park, except in areas designated for native use. A survey done 10 years ago by the Progressive Conservative government found that 70 per cent of Algonquin Park users were against using the area for hunting and trapping.

The Liberals, under David Peterson, decided to respect the wishes of the majority and set a deadline of 2010 to eliminate trapping and hunting in the area. The current provincial government, the NDP, is still committed to meeting this deadline.

Hodgson said he understood the government's position, but added the government has an obligation to do what is right and not necessarily what is popular.

"Contract law is the basis of our society and we have a valid contract," said Hodgson. "If the government is going to do something then it should do it legally and properly."

Deputy-Reeve Curry Bishop told Martel that council would not sit by and let the government proceed without a legal fight.

Martel said he would take that information back to the ministry.

Council has instructed clerk Donna McCallum to look for a lawyer with some experience fighting the provincial government.

Other topics discussed by council with Martel included expanding the use of all-terrain vehicles in the park and a new road access to into the McRae addition of the park.

Martel effectively squashed both proposals. Martel said the park wants to create a new

Spending limit of $1,500 is set Council will help July 1

by Jay Kerr-Wilson

Minden council has agreed to financially support the planned Canada Day activities in the village, after a lengthy discussion about the cost of the plans and the need for budgetary restraint.

At last Thursday's meeting, council considered a letter from Canada Day organizer Lisa Connolly, setting out a number of requests for municipal help during the celebrations.

The downtown businesses, in conjunction with other groups and clubs in Minden, are planning a variety of Canada Day events to take place along South Water Street near the Gull River.

In her letter, Connolly requested that the municipality close the street from the corner to the post office, provide portable toilets, garbage cans and picnic tables, move the bleachers from the fairgrounds to the river bank, and allow use of the arena. Council was also asked to contribute to the cost of having a fireworks display in Minden.

Last year council decided to drop the fireworks display in an attempt to keep the municipal budget under control.

In considering support for the fireworks, Reeve Bern Berry cautioned council about the cost involved in setting up such a display.

The BIA has committed $500 to the cost of fireworks, the Rotary Club has committed another $500 and the fire department is planning some fundraising to help cover the costs. The price of the fireworks is between $2,500 and $3,000.

Councillor Gerald Rome said the fire department needs at least three weeks to order the fireworks and organize the display, and said

Numbering system approved

by Jay Kerr-Wilson

Buildings in the village of Minden now have street numbers.

A numbering system was worked out by Minden's post master Dorian Malloy and Tom Hubercheck, the head of the municipal building department.

Each building and lot in the village of Minden has been assigned a street number and a list of the numbers has been produced as well as a map. The list is available at the municipal office, the post office and Home Hardware, so people can look up the numbers of their houses. Copies of the list will also be provided to fire, police and ambulance departments.

The numbers will make it easier for emergency crews to find buildings during emergencies and will help delivery people and visitors find their destinations if they are unfamiliar with the village.

Malloy cautions that the new street addresses should not be used as mailing addresses. Because the post office will not be using the street numbers to sort mail, people will still have to have mail sent to their box numbers.

Hubercheck and Malloy presented the street numbering plan to council at last Thursday's meeting, and Reeve Bern Berry praised the two men's efforts. "You've done a great deal of work, and a great service to the people of the village," he said.

Council has decided that it will not release the list of street numbers for anyone wishing to use the information for commercial purposes.

The concept of assigning street numbers to the buildings in Minden was last attempted three years ago, when Brad Bradamore was the municipal building official. At that time, there was discussion by council whether the number 13 should be used in the system, given the superstitious connection to bad luck.

Hubercheck and Malloy had no such qualms about including 13 in their numbering system.

"Actually my house is number 13," said Malloy, "but I don't mind because I was married on the 13th and born on the 13th."

Staanworth struggles to alter board membership

by Times staff

The board of directors of the Staانworth Non-profit Housing Corporation has been thrown into disarray, after it was discovered that the corporation has been operating in contravention of its own by-laws.

The corporation, which is sponsored by the municipalities of Stanhope, Lutterworth and Anson, Hindon and Minden, has built three housing projects in the village of Minden as is seeking government funding to build a fourth.

When Staانworth was incorporated by the Ministry of Consumer and Corporate Affairs in September 1982, its letters of patent stated that each of the three municipalities must appoint two councillors to serve on the board of directors. The total board is to consist of the six municipal representatives and seven other members drawn from the general public.

Over the years, the condition of municipal representation on the board was not adhered to, and the corporation ceased to comply with its by-laws.

Until last week, only Minden had councillors serving on the board of directors.

Don Finn, the corporation's lawyer, sent a letter to each of the three municipalities asking that two municipal representatives be appointed by each council to sit on the board of directors.

Instead of clearing the issue however, the letter has caused confusion, and three councils responded in three different ways.

Coby Islander tournament will return next year

by Jay Kerr-Wilson

Minden is still the host of the largest open-invitation hockey tournament in Ontario.

The organizers of the annual Coby Islanders Easter tournament have worked out their differences with the municipal recreation committee, and the arena has been booked for next year's event.

There had been concerns, leading up to this year's tournament on the weekend of April 17, 18 and 19, from members of the Coby Islander organization, particularly about the cost of holding the event in Minden.

In 1991, it cost $55 an hour to rent ice at the Minden arena. This year, during the regular season, the cost of ice time increased to $65 an hour.

Because the Coby Islander tournament occurs after the end of the regular season, the organizers were charged a premium of $75 an hour for the tournament to compensate the municipality for having to keep the ice in the arena.

The organizers balked at the price of the facilities and met with the Minden recreation committee to try to sort out the issue. The committee decided to lower the cost of the ice to $70 an hour, providing the Islanders could guarantee ice rental for at least 45 hours.

The two sides agreed to meet again after the tournament to further negotiate the concerns raised by the Coby Islanders.

On May 7, tournament organizer Pat Russell met with the committee.

After some discussion, the committee agreed to reimburse the Islanders for almost $280 to cover community centre and ice time rentals in 1991.

In return, Russell agreed that the $70 an hour rental fee was not unreasonable and confirmed that the event would be returning to Minden in 1993.

While there have been reports about the tournament going to Lindsay, Russell told the committee that there have been no negotiations to move the tournament to Lindsay, and many of the teams which participate do not want the event to leave Minden.

that unless a decision is made soon, time could run out.

Jean Anthon suggested that council match the $500 donated by the BIA and Rotary, and that if the fund is still short of money after fundraising efforts that the three groups agree to make up the difference between them.

Berry suggested council could support the event in principle, but asked that any financial commitment be delayed until after council could "get a handle" on exactly what was being asked of them.

"I'm not saying don't play a part, I'm saying be wary that we don't end up with a two or three thousand dollar bill," he said. "We have to have a handle on it, and know what we're working with."

Deputy-Reeve Lewis Stevens said spending municipal money and lending township support to this kind of event is an appropriate decision for council to make.

"All the facilities they're asking for belong to the township so, in turn, they belong to the people," he said. "All they're asking is to make the township's facilities available to the people. We may have to kick some money in, but it's a reasonable way to spend taxpayers money."

Berry said during last fall's municipal campaign all the councillors had promised to watch how taxes were spent. "There has to be a balance," he said, and suggested delaying until after the May 28 meeting of the finance committee.

After lunch, council met with Clayton Cameron, superintendent of public works, to discuss the work required for the event.

Cameron said it would require four township employees to close the street, move the tables and garbage cans into place and clean up after the event. The cost in wages to the township would be about $400.

Council agreed to support the festivities, but put a $1,500 limit on the value of municipal support including wages, arena rental and a $500 donation toward the cost of fireworks.

canoe area off Peterson Road on King Lake for people who don't want to walk lengthy portages.

"People don't have the vacation time they used to. They want to spend three or four days in the park and then get out."

Bishop said he wanted all-terrain vehicles to be allowed during the hunting and trapping season.

"Let's say you kill a moose. How are you going to get it out. Even young people can't do that," said Bishop.

Martel replied, "There's no question that all-terrain vehicles would make that easier, but there are other ways and people have been doing it for years."

Councillors required to sit on board

municipal council representation on the board, did not wish to change the status quo. Council passed a resolution re-affirming Wayne Hughes and Elizabeth Myers as the Lutterworth's representatives on the Staunworth board. The resolution also said Myers and Hughes will report to council as necessary.

Council said the two members were doing an excellent job serving on the board and there was no reason to replace them with councillors. If the province conducts an audit of the corporation and finds the board does not meet the by-law, council agreed that new members might have to be appointed.

Stanhope council heeded the instructions of Staunworth Non-profit Housing Corporation and appointed two new members to the corporation's board, following the resignation of the two existing members.

Both Stanhope's clerk Gerald Bain and former Reeve Jim Harrison offered letters of resignation to council which were accepted unhappily.

"If it ain't broke you don't fix it, but it has come to the point where we have to do something," said Councillor Murray Daniels.

"We have letters of resignation and I don't know if we can do anything else, but accept them even if we don't want to," said Reeve Fred Gardner who will now be a member on the board.

Bain said his time on the corporation's board was rewarding and challenging.

"Nothing beats the feeling of being able to stand beside a needed building that you helped create," said Bain.

Despite Bain's enthusiasm, no councillor immediately offered to take his place. After some discussion, councillor Jim Hicks took the position, at least until the current term expires this fall.

The issue of Staunworth representation was not even discussed at Minden council. Two members of council, Gerald Rome and Deputy-Reeve Lewis Stevens, already sit on the Staunworth board.

But a second condition of the bylaw states that one of the two municipal councillors appointed to the board must be the "Chairman of the municipality", which could be interpreted as meaning the reeve. In that case, both Minden and Lutterworth still have not met the conditions of the patent.

Some corporation members are concerned that unless the board is made to conform, all of the actions taken by Staunworth, including its present and future projects, could be legally challenged.

Staunworth operates two senior apartments and a low-cost townhouse development in Minden and is seeking funding to build a supportive housing project.

Dysart approves small tax increase

by Andy Holloway

Ratepayers in the municipality of Dysart et al can breathe a sigh of relief after council approved a modest 2.8 per cent increase in property taxes.

However, the municipalities restraint was offset by a Board of Education budget increase of 14.2 per cent or $533,023.

The increased education levy means that 64 cents of each tax dollar will go to the Board of Education, a rise of 2 cents over last year, while 13 cents goes to the county and 23 cents goes to Dysart et al.

Council members indicated their displeasure with the school board's budget increase at last Monday's council meeting.

"I personally feel that the Board could have looked a little harder to cut spending," said Deputy-Reeve Curry Bishop.

Reeve Chris Hodgson said while council has to collect the taxes raised by the board's budget, he hoped voters would realize council did not create it and were not responsible for the increase.

Spending levels cut

Hodgson said the municipality's budget was "a good one" and it "keeps Haliburton an affordable place to live and maintains the level of services" that council provides.

The new mill rate will be 1099.76 of which 708.090 goes to the school board.

For every $1000 of assessment there will be a $92.07 increase in property taxes over last year. Dysart et al will receive $6.98 of that sum, the county gets $3.76 while the school board gets a whopping $81.33.

Council cut $270,000 in spending from last year, but declining revenues caused the slight increase in the amount raised through taxes compared to last year. Council also had to deal with a $55,800 deficit left over from 1991.

The fact that this is not an election year meant council was able to shave $25,000 from last year's totals, while other spending cuts came because major projects like installing street lights were complete last year and only need maintenance this year.

Similar cuts were made with the Harcourt and West Guilford Community Centres, both of whose budgets were cut almost in half.

The Museum had its budget approved at $74,400, an increase of $3,500 over last year, while the Rail's End Gallery received a $4,650 increase to up its budget to $22,644.

The budget was passed unanimously by council.

In addition to the budget, sewage user fees were increased 10 per cent to $110 while a dumping fee of $15 per metal appliance at Kennis and West Guilford dump sites was also passed.

Bread, not circuses

It's that time of year again, when Minden council debates the merits of financially supporting a Canada Day fireworks display for the village.

Last year, the drive to keep tax increases to a bare minimum won out and the display was cancelled. Although there were some complaints from residents, there were also those who felt council had done the right thing by pulling the plug on the pyrotechnics.

This year the downtown merchants requested that the display be brought back, offering to contribute $500 toward the cost, an offer which was matched by the Rotary Club.

Council's discussion on the issue, which encompassed the entire July 1 festivities, split along two trains of thought.

Reeve Bern Berry cautioned council against writing a blank cheque for the event and risking unnecessary costs. He was especially wary of committing too much money to a fireworks display which is both brief and expensive.

Deputy-Reeve Lewis Stevens took a slightly different track, arguing that the municipality's money is really the people's money and should therefore be spent on a celebration for the people.

As commendable as Stevens' intent is, he should take his own argument one step further. If it is the people's money, then the people should be the ones to decide if they want to spend it on fireworks or not.

Instead of making the decision for the taxpayers, some of whom are not very enthusiastic about the idea of fireworks, council should encourage those who do want the display to donate money to the fire department or the Rotary Club specifically for that purpose.

If enough people want the fireworks, the money will be easily raised and the show will proceed. If people are unwilling to donate to see the display, then council should question how vital a priority this is.

In terms of the overall budget, the cost of fireworks may be insignificant, but with the effects of a recession still upon us, government should be concentrating on giving us bread, not circuses.

Japan could buy Canada, and have money left

Take a look at the Japanese. They have virtually no resources. All they have going for them are 90 million overachievers! Think what the Japanese would give for Canada's resources!

President, Dow Chemical Company

Yep, pretty impressive, the story of Japan. "One huge processing plant" someone called the country, "scouring the world for raw materials."

It's an amazing story when you think about it. Just a generation ago, Japan was prostrate. Slapped flat by the Allied Forces. Defenceless. Yenless. Forced to accept

Black 'n White

by Arthur Black

handouts from the rest of the world.

And today? The Economist magazine recently did a study of Japanese real estate. Overall value: seventeen trillion Canadian dollars. In case you're wondering what that looks like it's $17,000,000,000,000.00

Or, as The Economist explained it: "In theory, Japan can buy the whole of America by selling off Metropolitan Tokyo, or all of Canada by hawking the grounds of the Imperial Palace."

How did the Japanese manage to accomplish all that in less than half a century? In a word — sweat. A Japanese school teacher would collapse in disbelief if he saw the soft ride Canadian school kids get. And it doesn't stop with the graduation ceremony. Your typical Japanese working stiff — white collar, blue collar and no collar at all — gives a helluva lot more than you or I would ever dream of putting out. An average Japanese office worker puts in about 2,250

Threat of rabies from bats is very real

Editor:

I enjoyed reading your article on "Bats, throwing out the mythology". I too like and respect bats, they do a good job of keeping our abundant insect population under control.

However, I am very concerned with the so called myth that "bats carry rabies". Bats can carry rabies! They are the only mammals that can be asymptomatic carriers.

Quoting from, Continuing Education for the practicing Veterinarian, July 1983.

"Bats are especially influential in the spread of rabies in the Americas. In the early 1900's, the association of vampire bats with rabies was clearly established. A few years later, frugivorous bats were implicated in transmission of the disease. Insectivorous bats, the only type existing naturally in the U.S. (and Canada) have also been shown to harbour the disease. Bats are effective transmitters of the disease because of their widespread distribution throughout the Americas. In addition, they can be asymptomatic carriers that can shed the virus in saliva, respiratory secretions and by direct bite for months to years."

Our northern bats become infected with the rabies virus whilst sharing hibernating caves with southern bats. The silver-haired bat is known to hibernate south of the Canadian border.

Over the past few years Haliburton County has had at least two positive cases of rabies in bats, two cases involved family pets found playing with the bat and the owners having the wisdom to get the bat checked for rabies.

The following are the numbers of positive rabies cases in bats for 1990 and 1991. In 1990 there were 57 in Canada, 25 of which were in Ontario. In 1991 there were 60 in Canada, 39 in Ontario.

I implore Mr. Poropat to be very very careful when handling his wild caught bats.

Canadian success stories

Over the years, we put in place the elements needed to sustain growth and prosperity. Despite the allegations of doom and gloom we hear in the media, there is a lot of good news around.

For example, the United Nations ranks Canada number one according to their human development index. This means that we have the best place to live in the world! Also, the International Monetary Fund predicts that Canada will have the strongest growth of the seven biggest industrialized nations in 1992.

We can add to the list a series of Canadian companies that are successful here and abroad. Their success is the fruit of hard work, tough decisions and good business sense. The hard times we've been through were an even greater motivation for some of them to succeed.

Not afraid of strong competition from abroad, the innovators, the thinkers and the leaders of the market place build top quality goods and services now more than ever.

Many Canadian companies who live by these principles provide good examples for entrepreneurs looking for the recipe for success.

With sales of $135 million last year, Clearly Canadian Beverage Corporation from Vancouver exported 95% of its production to the U.S., Ireland, England, Sweden and Japan. The company expects to sell 23 million cases of mineral water this year.

Calgary's Agriteam Canada Consulting Ltd., established in 1987, is now recognized as a leader in international agricultural consulting. They have 18 major contracts in 12 countries. Their earnings more than tripled in two years.

Mecair Aerospace Industries of St.

Laurent, Quebec, builds fasteners for the aerospace and defence industries in Canada, the U.S., Europe and Asia. Their sales have ballooned by 600% since 1988, their first year. Mecair, with its international approach to a highly specialized market, expects sales to double by 1994.

Inter-City Products of Toronto is North America's second largest maker of residential and light commercial air conditioners and furnaces. The firm closed a plant in the U.S. in favour of a plant in Brantford, Ontario because of good labour-management relations, higher productivity, flexibility, quality and quick turnaround time.

Fire and safety experts Safety Boss of Calgary owe much of their recent success to the phenomenal feat of putting out 180 of 732 oil fires burning in Kuwait last year. President J. Miller confirms that, "Success, in this industry, is not attributed to the cheapest bids, but instead to a good reputation for reliability and performance."

Established in 1973, Tri-Star Industries of Yarmouth, N.S. sells custom-built ambulances and other specialty vehicles to 20 countries. In fact, their exports account for 80% of total sales. Tri-Star has implemented a quality assurance program to keep up with the increasing demands of the market. "At Tri-Star, we believe that our customers come first. A sale does not end when we've delivered our product," says President Keith Condon.

Over the next few months, Canadians will hear more success stories. Seeing Canadians succeeding at home and abroad can only make us prouder to live in the best country in the world.

Visit a pleasure

Editor:

I would like to express the great pleasure my co-worker and I experienced, while working in your area recently.

It was first time visits to Haliburton for both of us. Your country-side is breathtaking! And the people were exceptionally friendly.

The CITC Section 25 team were conducting a survey of the area's business in response to local training boards on behalf of Bancroft and Haliburton communities. These reports will be used in conjunction with the decisions of "local training board" boundaries.

Because of your service, friendliness, and co-operation this survey was completed in record time.

Many thanks Haliburton County.

Government underfunding is putting MCSS out of business

Editor:

The Ministry of Community and Social Services is going out of business! It really is. Just take a look around in your community; you may have to search a little because the clients MCSS service usually have little political clout. They are the children, the developmentally challenged, the kids in trouble, the young persons with mental health problems.

The Ministry of Community and Social Services are systematically downsizing and closing the larger developmentally handicapped centres that remain: Edgar, Huronia, Darcy Place, Muskoka Center and more.

At the same time MCSS are underfunding and reducing payments to transfer payment agencies in your community adolescent services, Whitby Psychiatric Hospital, Children's Aid Society, Young Services.

Tell me where our priorities are! Tell me we really care for the kids. Our public services, those remaining, we cannot afford to lose them.

Yours truly,
Joan Gates
OPSEU Executive Board Member.

Hydro service appreciated

Editor:

At this hectic time of year, when it seems most agencies want to put road blocks in the way of the small business owners, it is refreshing to deal with people as kind and understanding as the folks at Minden Hydro. When the pressure is on, they seem to come through for us every time. Guys and gals, we salute you and we thank you!

What a difference a generation makes hours at his or her desk every year. That's about six weeks more than the average North American office worker. As a spokesman by the name of Yukio Matsuyama explained, "The Japanese are addicted to tension as a welcome way of life, as a stimulating springboard for individual and collective advancement."

Mind you there is a price tag for all that workaholicism. It's called karoshi — literally, "death by overworking". It's the second biggest killer in the country according to a recent Japanese Ministry of Health report.

There are other signs that all is not rosy in the Land of

The Rising Sun. A new business has opened in Tokyo in which actors and actresses visit lonely old people and 'pretend' to be their sons and daughters. The actors feign contrition and shame while the old folks 'scold' them for not visiting more often. Price tag for this little fantasy play: $1,100 per therapy session.

And there are indications that the next generation of Japanese might not be quite so dedicated. The Japanese who hauled themselves out of the rubble of World War Two have — as parents everywhere — made certain that their children didn't endure the same hardships. That's why, according to a recent study, more than half of Japanese children have their own televisions, radios and tape recorders. A third of them have their own telephones as well.

And they're fat. Japanese kids scorn the traditional rice based diet of their parents. They want junk food. The kind they see on TV. Researchers asked them what their favourite game was. Most frequent answer: watching television.

Japanese child psychologists say it's even worse when the kids hit their teens. "They have no interest in anything," says one expert. "They live from day to day with no goal in life."

Hmmm. Now where have I heard that before?

To paraphrase a cigarette ad, you've come a long way, tomo dachi.

MOE finds fault with West Guilford dump

The following items were discussed at the May 11 meeting of Dysart et al council.

Landfill not well run

The Ministry of the Environment now has proof that the West Guilford dump is poorly manned.

After receiving complaints about the condition of the landfill site in West Guilford, the M.O.E sent an official to see if the dump's hours of operation were being maintained and whether it was properly manned.

Apparently, the official found the dump was sometimes locked during operating hours and at other times it was open, but no one was looking after it.

Dysart et al will be hiring someone to man the dump when a job description is compiled.

Sewer equipment needed

Dysart et al will spend $7000 on new equipment at its Water Pollution Control Plant. The new equipment is needed because of regulation changes set by the Ministry of the Environment.

Trucks blocking traffic

Trucks unloading during the day on Haliburton's main streets are causing havoc with traffic again.

Council are looking into several options to solve the problem. Councillor Robert Heinze suggested that the main street become one-way with York Street going the other way. This was rejected last year by council.

Fining the truckers was also proposed, but councillor Brian Watts, himself a former trucker, said that if one trucker is fined then you will never see him or his company in Halibur-ton again. He said truckers would refuse to deliver to the area.

A third option is to restrict the hours that the truckers can unload on the main streets.

Taxi by-law passed

A by-law requiring taxi-cab drivers to have set rates that passengers must be able to see at all times was passed by council.

The by-law means that if it costs $10 to travel from Haliburton to Minden on a Monday then it has to cost $10 or less every other day. Companies can offer discounts to attract passengers, but can not charge more than the set limit.

The by-law also states that free enterprise will govern the number of taxis in the area meaning anyone with a car can become a taxi driver.

Snowmobile donations

The Potash Snowmobile Club will be given $1000 for work to be done in the Potash area. The money will be used to clear up snowmobile trails.

The Haliburton County Snowmobile Association was granted a request for up to one week of bulldozer time per year.

Tire recycling approved

Dysart et al will have improved tire pickup service. When asked if the service needed to be improved Reeve Chris Hodgson quickly replied, "Yes, the tires are just rolling in," without a trace of a smile causing council to have a good laugh.

Council approved the removal of L.C.B.O. boxes to the Haliburton dump where anyone wanting to use them can pick them up free of charge.

Council is also looking into moving its chipper around to various dump sites to mulch the brush that is left there. The main problem is that the chipper has to be hauled by a dump truck because of its weight. The mulch from the chipper could easily be sold because there is a steady demand for it.

Private hanger approved

by Andy Holloway

Stanhope council has agreed to a proposal for a private airplane hanger at its airport.

The hanger was conditionally approved by council upon the completion of a proper contract and lease between the municipality and Hannu Halminen.

The terms of the deal have yet to be finalized, but several points were agreed upon in principle.

In return for building the hanger and buying the wiring and transformer needed for the operation, Halminen will not have to pay rent for four years, get the use of the county's backhoe to dig the ditch needed for the wiring, refilling of the ditch and a new culvert for access to the hanger.

The rent rate agreed upon by council and Halminen is 150 per cent of the tie-down rate which is currently $200 per year.

Councillor Murray Daniels suggested that Halminen use local contractors to give the area an economic boost. Halminen said he would be buying a pre-fabricated steel hanger, but he would take bids for erecting the hanger and for making the concrete base.

The transformer that Halminen will be using will have room for other facilities to come on line in the future as the site is developed.

In other airport business, council requested more information on a proposed small restaurant.

Airport manager Mike Carey said a lot of the airports around the area, including Lindsay and Peterborough, now have restaurants for the pilots. He also said he did not expect the restaurant to make money.

"It won't be a business, but just a guy who can prepare a meal or two for the pilots," said Carey.

Councillor Barb Wangle suggested putting in a vending machine, but Reeve Fred Gordner said no company would be willing to put one in because it would not make money.

Bakery/second hand store opens in Kinmount

Somerville Township Reeve John Huke cited the opening of a business in Kinmount as an example of the initiative needed to pull Canada out of its current economic downturn. "It's time for a new attitude...to get out there and get going," the reeve stated as he snipped the ribbon at the Country Kin Bakery and New 2 U store.

The businesses opened last Wednesday in the building south of the Kinvale Inn. The businesses are owned by Gordon and Linda Tait, who also operate the Cookery Restaurant on Highway 121 south of Burnt River. Daughter and son-in-law Wayne and Karen Parker from the Welland area will manage the businesses.

Fun Fair will feature hockey display

This Saturday will be Hockey Day in Minden thanks to the efforts of the Minden Home and School Association and Greyhound Bus Lines of Canada.

The bus company will be bringing two mobile exhibits featuring items from Canada's Hockey Hall of Fame to the Home and School Association's annual Fun Fair. The event will be held this Saturday at Archie Stouffer Elementary School.

The two Greyhound coaches have been converted to provide an opportunity for individuals to see hockey memorabilia normally only on display at the hockey museum in Toronto.

Among the items that could be on display is hockey's grandest prize of all, the Stanley Cup. The presence of the cup will depend on the progress of the play-offs and whether it will have to be on stand-by for its annual presentation to the championship team.

Even if the cup is not on board, there will be many other items tracing hockey's history starting back in 1880 through to the present era. Visitors will have an opportunity to examine some of the early skates used by players, equipment from the six-team years of the NHL including memorabilia from Gordie Howe, Bobby Hull and Jacques Plante, and more current items from Wayne Gretzky and Brett Hull.

OPP looks into Lions' event

Charity toll booth draws traffic complaints

by Jay Kerr-Wilson

Complaints from motorists have prompted an OPP investigation of the voluntary toll booth operated by the Lions Club in Minden last weekend.

On Saturday, members of the Lions Club set themselves up on the Main Street Bridge and at the corner of Main Street and South Water Street where they accepted donations from passing motorists.

Although some of the club members were busy directing vehicles through the busy intersection, at times the heavy long-weekend traffic backed up as cars slowed down to contribute to the club.

At least two motorists, one of them an off-duty OPP officer, were not amused by the situation and lodged complaints with OPP Constable Eric Nystedt. Under the Highway Traffic Act, it is an offence to stop traffic for the purpose of selling a product or service.

Nystedt spoke to the Lions members who were manning the toll booth at the time the complaints were lodged and wrote down the names of the club members involved in the event. At press time, no charges had been laid against the club members, and the Lions continued to operate the toll booth during and after Nystedt's investigation.

Throughout the incident the club members cooperated with the constable and even volunteered the names of Lions who would be running the toll booth later in the day.

Motorists who donated to the Lions were presented with a card thanking them for the donation.

Above: Lions Club member Brian Moore accepts a donation from a motorist passing through the toll booth set up on the Main St. Bridge last Saturday. Right: OPP constable Eric Nystedt questions Lion Art Hoskens who was helping to run the toll booth. Some people complained about the traffic being backed up by the Lions event.

Minden council gave their blessing to the project when the Lions presented the idea in April. The club was hoping to raise money to support community projects, especially the expansion of the community centre.

Credit Cards

It's hard to believe, but people still give their credit card numbers over the phone. High pressure telemarketing sales people call with a great pitch then want your credit card number. Once they have your card number they have authorization to use it. Quite often the product purchased from them can be bought locally cheaper or of better quality. If you are called, ask for the salesperson's name and company, check out the company and the quality of their product. If they are not prepared to give you this information, hang up.

Drug Charges

Donald John Van Beek, 28, of no fixed address has been charged with Possession of a Narcotic and Cultivation of Marijuana. A search warrant executed on a Lutterworth township residence on May 12, 1992 revealed 200 marijuana plants growing in an artificial environment. Van Beek has been held in custody pending a Bail Hearing in Lindsay on May 14.

The Minden food bank got a boost and shoppers at Dollo's IGA enjoyed a snack this past weekend thanks to the efforts of a group of volunteers and suppliers. Proceeds from the hot dog and pop offered for $1.50 will be used to help replenish the community's food bank cupboard. A number of volunteers assisted with the effort including, heat transfer supervisor Dan Larocque, right, client interface facilitator Barry Cray and monetary comptroller Jean Lacey. With the assistance of Dollo's IGA, barbecue supplies were provided by Shopsy's Dempsters and Coca Cola.

ASES Fun Fair

Hockey memories rolling into Minden

(from page 9)

While the main emphasis is on the progress of professional hockey, the displays also pay tribute to the growth and development of amateur hockey in Canada and the United States, as well as international hockey, and the All Star games, starting with the first such event in 1934.

One of the coaches coming to Minden will include a video produced specifically to highlight the many great moments in the sport of hockey.

The hockey exhibit will be the crowning touch on the Home and School Association's eighth Fun Fair, a fund raising venture which has grown in popularity over the years.

The day features a variety of games and activities geared to school age children and their parents with the emphasis on fun and participation.

Youngsters will have an opportunity to test their artistic skills in the bike decorating contest. The entries will be judged in two categories with the Kindergarten to grade 3 entries being judged at 11:15 a.m. and the grades 4 to 8 at 12:30.

A presentation of Highland dancing will be featured at noon.

Throughout the fair there will be horse-drawn wagon rides provided by Clayton Cameron, opportunities to test your skills on a variety of games of chance in the school gymnasium, raffles, bake sale, book sale, an auction of items donated by members of the school staff, rummage sale, face painting, and much more.

Through all the activities, chefs will be toiling over barbecues to provide food and refreshments.

The Home and School Association Fun Fair is scheduled for Saturday May 23 starting at 11 a.m. and continuing to 1:30 p.m. There is no charge for admission.
